01 — INTERIOR ARCHITECTURE · HOSPITALITY

Le Moulin des Loges

Converting a mill into a holiday home

CONTEXT

An old mill standing alone in the salt marshes is to become a holiday home for four, with a small independent shop for the salt harvester. From May to September, guests take part in the salt harvest.

THE IDEA

Set in a flat landscape, the mill recalls a stranded ship. It becomes an “inhabited boat”: compact cabins, shared spaces open to the landscape, a gangway and a footbridge.

DELIVERABLES

Plans, sections, axonometry, perspectives

Layout

To the north, private rooms slip into blue volumes, like cabins. To the south, a double-height shared space, crossed by the floating staircase and the upper gangway.

Sections and volumes

The sections show the cabins nested beneath the retained roof structure. The axonometry reveals the gangway and staircase linking both levels.
